

FEDERAL BANK SYSTEM TO AID HOME BUILDING PROPOSED BY HOOVER

With It, President Hopes to Thaw Out Frozen B. & L. Credit Jam

NEEDS CONGRESS O. K.

$1,800,000,000 Available Under New Plan

Washington, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A $1,800,000,000 plan to build a home building credit fund is being planned by President Hoover through the creation of a nation-wide string of new federal banks.

The President announced late yesterday he would request Congress to set up a dozen Home Loan Discount banks, capitalized at around $150,000,000 but capable of advancing 12 times that amount to institutions dealing in small mortgage loans. He expects the results to spread far and wide. Among those hoped for he listed:

A revival of home building and a resultant increase in employment.

An emergency easing of financial strain upon sound banks and loan associations dealing in home building securities.

A safeguarding against future building slumps.

A long-time promotion of home ownership through the financial strengthening of credit institutions.

The Chief Executive's sudden launching of his plan caused some surprise. Although he has conferred twice recently with groups of bankers, real estate and building and loan association men, still another such conference is scheduled for next week.

Then, early in December, he will meet with a White House conference on home building and home ownership, planned as the first of its kind and expected to delve into every ramification of the problem.

Mr. Hoover's disclosure of his $1,800,000,000 national credit corporation plan of seven weeks ago contained no forecast of the present discount bank proposal. The proposed institution, he said, will not displace the former, but is intended to "occupy an entirely different field of action."

The credit corporation was formed to rediscount gilt-edged securities held by banks but not eligible for rediscount by the federal reserve system.

"There is no element of inflation in the plan," he asserted, "but simply a better organization of credit for these (home building) purposes."

Since more than 200,000 homes are erected annually in normal times, contributing, with furnishings to expenditures of over $2,000,000 a year, the President hopes for a sharp revival of element from the operation of his proposal.

"A considerable part of our unemployment," he said, "is due to stagnation in residential construction. It is true there has been some overbuilding in certain localities in (Continued On Page Six.)"

FREIGHTER SEIZED FOR LIQUOR PLOT

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The American freighter Arlyn, which arrived here last Monday from Cuba with raw sugar, was ordered seized today on an order from collector of the port Philip Elting, because of an alleged conspiracy to evade the federal laws not only as to the Eighteenth amendment, but also on violation of the customs and immigration laws.

The cause for the seizure action grew out of a rescue made by the Arlyn off Cape Hatteras in February, when she not only saved the crew of fourteen men aboard a disabled British rum runner, but also took aboard the cargo consisting of 4,000 cases of liquor valued at $500,000.

The crew was brought to New York, and, as the Arlyn was in the coastwise service, she did not stop at quarantine. She is alleged to have put in at a pier near 35th street, New York, where the liquor was discharged.

The Arlyn, after the master and crew of thirty-five men were questioned for several days by special agents of the treasury department under the direction of Inspector Joseph Lynch, was permitted to go to the pier of the National Sugar Refinery at Long Island City, to discharge her sugar cargo.

Not Guilty Is Plea Of Mail Order Romeo; Wife Has Lost Faith

Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Powers.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Harry F. Powers pleaded not guilty today to charges of killing Mrs. Asta Buick Elcher and her three children, of Park Ridge, Ill., and Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Worcester, Mass. December 7 was the date set for his trial.

Powers is accused of luring the women here with promises of marriage, killing them and the children, and burying the bodies in a ditch near his garage at Quiet Dell, near here.

Mrs. Elcher and her children disappeared in June from their Park Ridge home. Their bodies were not found until late in July. Mrs. Lemke's body was found several days later.

Powers was taken into court for arraignment this morning under a heavy guard. A crowd of three or four hundred persons gathered to see the prisoner.

The prisoner's counsel petitioned for a change of venue, averring that Powers could not obtain a fair trial in Harrison county.

Powers was brought here from the state prison at Moundsville to plead. He was taken to the state penitentiary September 20 for safekeeping after a mob gathered about the county jail here.

Five separate indictments were returned against the man, one for each of the killings, he pleaded not guilty to each indictment.

Powers entered his plea in a low voice. He was calm as Judge Southern read the indictment.

"What is your plea?" asked the Judge.

"Not guilty," answered Powers. He spoke no other words during the entire procedure.

The prisoner was led from his cell in the county jail this morning to a room in the federal building (Continued On Page Six.)

Baby Girl Born After Mother Is Killed in Crash

Columbus, O., Nov. 13.—(AP)—A baby girl was born alive fifteen minutes after the mother died of injuries received in an automobile accident here last night.

Struck by an automobile, the mother, Anna Martin, 16, died en route to a hospital. Recognizing the emergency, physicians performed a caesarian operation and the baby, weighing 7½ pounds, was revived an hour after its birth.

Dr. Joseph Price, superintendent of Mercy hospital, said that quick work by attending physicians accounted for the success of the rare operation. They required only 30 seconds.

While such operations have been made after the death of the mother from disease, Dr. Price said he had no knowledge of one performed successfully after death from injuries. "The fortunate thing about the whole affair," Dr. Price said, "was that the doctors immediately recognized the emergency and the possibility of delivering a child, and by prompt and energetic action, did so."

The young mother was struck by an automobile while crossing a street near her home here. Had she lived the baby would have been born within a week, physicians said.

MOTHER OF SLAIN YOUTH HAS NO DESIRE TO SEE KILLER GO TO EXECUTION

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Francis A. Donaldson, Jr., who brought two sons to manhood only to have them taken by death, has no desire to see Edwin H. B. Allen go to the electric chair for slaying her elder boy last Monday.

She asks only that "he be punished so that he never can forget the awful thing that he has done."

"Taking the life of Edwin Allen," she said yesterday, "will not bring back my boy to me."

At the same time the society matron gave her version of the misunderstanding which blighted the romance between her son, Francis A. Donaldson, 3rd, and Miss Rose E. W. Allen, 18, debutante sister of Edwin.

Horace Allen, father of Rose and Edwin, has said young Donaldson betrayed his daughter and that it was the Donaldsons who opposed the marriage. Mrs. Donaldson yesterday said Allen himself objected to the union at first.

"Mr. Allen thought Mr. Donaldson had married a domestic in his father's household," she said. "To straighten things out my husband proved this to be untrue. After that there could be no question of his daughter's marrying beneath her."

"I never understood that there was a definite refusal by Mr. Allen to the marriage. I certainly never heard of a refusal to the marriage on the part of my husband."

SCHOOLING IN OHIO IS IN DANGER

Attorney General Rules Special Levies Voted of No Immediate Aid

MANY MAY BE CLOSED

Same Predicament Faced by Relief Levies

Columbus, O., Nov. 14.—(AP)—More than 200 Ohio school districts may be faced with serious financial troubles during the remainder of the school term as a result of a ruling of Attorney General Gilbert Bettman stating that special school levies cannot go on the tax books in December. Dr. B. O. Skinner, state director of education said today.

Blanton Ralls was placed in the chair at 7:13 o'clock and was pronounced dead seven minutes later. The current was sent through Walter's body at 7:31. Seven minutes later he too, was pronounced dead.

Smiling as he walked unassisted into the crowded death house, Blanton shook hands with many present and after telling all goodbye, declared he did not fire the shot that killed the sheriff when he came to arrest me and Walter with another uncle, Elijah Ralls, for stealing chickens. Two weeks ago he and Walter were saved from the chair by minutes when he signed a confession that Elijah did the shooting. Elijah was killed when he tried to escape several days after arrest.

Talking slowly, choosing his words carefully, Walter said Blanton confessed to him recently he fired the fatal shot.

"I was not the murderer of the honorable sheriff, George Davenport," Walter declared. "I tried to prevail upon my nephew, who fired the shot, to tell the truth. He admitted to me . . . that he fired the shot, which has always been my belief. . . . But I hold nothing against anybody."

Walter, his voice giving signs of breaking at times, repeated the 23rd Psalm from memory. He too, shook hands with many present.

Warden P. E. Thomas, addressing witnesses before they were allowed to go to the death house, called on all who had guns to lay them aside. Several did. All who had animosity in their hearts toward the men must keep it to themselves, he added. Two weeks ago when the executions were postponed several threatening remarks were heard made.

A second "last meal" was given the men during the afternoon, consisting of chicken and other food they desired.

Blanton's body was returned to his mother at Forsythe, Ga., and Walter's was sent to his widow at Crestline, O.

Two questions are raised by the ruling, Dr. Skinner claimed. One is whether the school district, in which the voters approved the levies, can participate in state aid before the special levy goes on the tax books and the other is whether state aid funds are adequate to care for the school needs until money is obtained from the levies.

Bettman also ruled that tax levies voted in various communities for poor relief may be placed in the books in December and the money will become immediately available. He held the old law controlled the levies rather than the new tax code.

The question of relief levies was raised by Mayor-elect Addison Q. Thacher, of Toledo and others who pointed out the need for immediate relief measures.

The Attorney General was believed today to have opened the way for construction of vital sewerage works.

High School Girl Put in Jail For Reckless Driving

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—(AP)—An 18-year-old high school girl must remain in jail under six months sentence on charges of assault and battery by automobile despite pleas of the mayor and others to free her.

Judge Utley Crane refused to reconsider the case, even though he was visited by a delegation of influential citizens and later by Mayor Harry A. Mackey, all seeking an immediate review of the case.

The girl, Mary Mazmanian, was sentenced ten days ago after evidence had been offered that she crashed into a drug store window while seeking to avoid hitting a truck. Witnesses said she was driving more than 50 miles an hour. Two men in the store were hurt.

"No one can stampede me into releasing this girl before I think she is properly punished," Judge Crane told the mayor. "If this young lady is not guilty of a first class case of criminal negligence, then I don't know what would constitute such a charge."

The girl said she hoped to graduate from high school with her class in February, if she was freed.

3,320 MILE PIPE LINE CARRIES GAS TO CHICAGO NOW

Chicago, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The harnessing of a wasted natural resource is giving pipe line builders $150,000,000 worth of business.

The turn of a valve, the burning of a softer, hotter blue flame in the kitchen burner, columns of newspaper comment on the gas rate controversy, were the signals to the public that a $100,000,000 tube from the Texas Panhandle to the shores of Lake Michigan had been completed.

Gas has been flowing for a month through that pipe, longest single unit of the 3,320 miles of gas lines being added to the nation's distributing systems.

Not so long ago the wells of the west were allowed to belch their rich gas deposits into the air to blow away unclaimed.

Pipe lines are ending that. Legislation forces conservation in some instances. A legislative act in California condemned waste of natural gas as an economic hardship to wealthy natural resources. Producers protested, but the California Supreme court upheld the law.

Now three 50 mile pipe lines are under construction in California, and throughout the western states at all counterparts of the great Texas-Chicago main are being laid.

One of the largest projects is a $3,000,000 line to Regina, Sask., tapping the Bowdoin field in Montana. Three California tubes whose estimated cost aggregates $5,000,000 will convey gas from the famous Kettleman Hills field, reputed the greatest potential oil source in the world, to Herndon near Fresno; from Sacramento to Marysville, and from Miipitas to San Francisco. Another $3,000,000 line will connect Ogden, Utah, and Pocatello, Idaho.

U. S. MILITARY ATTACHE ORDERED TO FRONT IN WAR TORN MANCHRIA

White Russians Accused of Plotting with Japan Against Soviet

FIGHTING CONTINUES

Chinese War Lord Says He Will Fight to Last Man

Chicago, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The belief that it is possible to feed an average family for several weeks, perhaps a month, with an expenditure of 53 cents, has been expressed by Dr. Lloyd Arnold.

Dr. Arnold, who is professor of bacteriology and preventive medicine at the University of Illinois, is experimenting with wheat with the idea of finding a cheap one-food balanced diet for the unemployed. Although he said yesterday, he was not yet ready to announce his complete findings, he expressed the opinion that a bushel of wheat would keep a family for several weeks. Wheat sold yesterday at 67 cents a bushel.

Mrs. Arnold has been conducting the experiment in her own kitchen. Only four pounds have been consumed in a week. There are 56 pounds to a bushel.

Tokyo, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The United States has authorized Colonel James C. McIlroy, embassy military attache, to visit Manchuria as an observer with other foreign military attaches, it was learned today. Colonel McIlroy will leave Tokyo November 19, in company with the military representatives of Great Britain, France and Russia. All these officers now are attending Japan's war maneuvers.

The attaches have been invited by the Tokyo government to stay in Manchuria as long as they think necessary. It is authoritatively said that their journey has no connection with reports that the League of Nations was considering a plan to settle the Manchurian controversy through a committee of observers.

Chinese reports say General Honjo, commanding the Japanese in Manchuria, has delivered a new ultimatum to Mah Chan-Shan, the Chinese general, demanding that he evacuate Tsitsihar by November 25 or Japan will take "effective steps."

New fighting in which more than 40 were reported killed, has taken place near Kaiyuan in the Nonni sector, the Chinese flanking movement is continuing and there were prospects of heavier fighting.

A fresh brigade left Tokyo to the cheers of the citizens, and reports circulated that Henry Pu-Yi, one-time boy emperor of China is on the way to Harbin to be enthroned under the Japanese protection, instead of Mukden as was previously reported.

A Moscow newspaper charged that "white" Russians in Siberia were plotting with Japan to provoke Soviet Russia into taking a hand in the Manchurian dispute.

"We will fight to the last man and the last bullet," General Mah Chan-Shan told Chinese newsmen at Tsitsihar today after he returned from an inspection trip at the front.

"Our defense plans are made in accordance with instructions from Chang Hsueh-Liang. Judging from movements of the Japanese it seems certain they plan to launch an attack upon our lines before November 16."

"We have made full preparations and are determined to defend the territory to the last ditch. The morale of our troops leaves nothing to be desired and we will fight as long as a single soldier remains."

Chinese telegrams from Tsitsihar reported that Japanese cavalry made several attacks on the left flank of the Chinese front line yesterday, but were thrown back each time.

BANK ROBBER ESCAPES JAIL

Marysville, O., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Belief that members of "his gang" engineered the break of Frank Circone, 20, Columbus bank bandit from the Union county jail here was expressed by county officers today as search for the man was spread to Cleveland, rumored headquarters of the band.

Circone broke away last night. He was talking quietly with two deputies and Sheriff William Roush when he suddenly spun on his heel, ran to the end of the "bull pen" of the jail, and scrambled through a hole sawed in window bars before the officers recovered from their surprise.

The window was in the rear of the jail, an unlighted portion. From that point, a little used road leads out of town. Sheriff Roush said a fast car apparently was waiting outside, for by the time a posse was organized, no trace of Circone could be found.

Only a few hours before he broke away, Circone already accused of robbing a Richwood, O., bank, had been implicated as a participant in robbery of patrons of a Canton restaurant, of the Gloucester, O., post office, and of numerous stores and gasoline filling stations about Columbus. Conviction of the bank robbery would have made a life sentence for him mandatory.

The Week's Attraction At Washington's Theatres

William Powell, Doris Kenyon and Marian Marsh in "The Road to Singapore" at the Fayette this Sunday and Monday.

FAYETTE
The countless admirers of the art of William Powell, will be glad to know that he may be seen Sunday and Monday at the Fayette Theater, in his first starring vehicle for Warner Bros., "The Road to Singapore."

In Mr. Powell's support are Doris Kenyon as lead; Marian Marsh—screen discovery of the year, as ingenue, Louis Calhern as male lead, Alison Shipworth in an unforgettable character role—Lumsden Hare, Tyrrell Davis and A. E. Mason. The story is by the celebrated British novelist and playwright, Roland Pertwee, Alfred E. Green, responsible for the Arliss successes, directed.

The scenes of "The Road to Singapore" are laid in the darkly glamorous, rain-swept, tomtom-haunted jungles of Ceylon. Philippa Marsh comes from England to marry Dr. March and on the steamship meets the suave and magnetic Hugh Dawley who in time makes her forget convention, in an attempt to get away from the husband, who neglects her for his patients.

"The Road to Singapore" is a masterpiece of dramatic expression. Star players, settings and men who first causes the girl to go astray but returns to atone for his recklessness in the years that have witnessed her triumphs and despairs.

With a rare sympathy and understanding and the production abounds in pictorial value and swift action. Wanda Tachok adapted the novel for the picture and dialogue was supplied by Zaida Sears and Leon Gordon.

The supporting cast is excellent, the featured roles including Jean Hersholt, John Mijan, Alan Hale, Hale Hamilton, Hilda Vaughn and others.

A big cast of film favorites is to be seen and heard in Paramount's finalization of "Murder by the Clock"—the mystery-thriller based on Rufus King's big-selling book of last season at the Fayette next Friday and Saturday.

William Boyd plays the role of Lieut. Valcour; Regis Toomey is Officer Cassidy; Sally O'Neil is Jane; Lilyan Tashman is Mrs. Herbert Endicott—a character which did not appear in the original story; Walter McGrail is Herbert Endicott.

For purposes of investing the film with a full amount of mystery the culprit, whose identity is not disclosed until the last few minutes, is a different person from the one brought to justice in the original novel.

PALACE

For sheer fun of the spontaneous, rib-ticking variety, few comedies of the current season excel the hilarity of "Radio Pictures"—"Cracked Nuts," at the Palace Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Based on a ludicrously funny situation, the picture carries its two stars, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, through an amazing series of comic and thrilling situations.

The story is laid in a mythical kingdom whose subjects are almost evenly divided between deposed kings and menacing executioners. Its most important monuments are tombstones dedicated to the memories of beheaded rulers.

Into this chaotic country come Wheeler and Woolsey with the intention of usurping the vacant crown. The two dodge executioners, stage thrilling battles with tanks and airplanes, hire executioners galore and finally come to the conclusion that Chicago is a tame spot in comparison.

Considerable romance is injected into this jovial comedy with the appearance of Dorothy Lee, and her sordid aunt, the irrepressibly funny Edna May Oliver.

She was not happy being bad but the racket wouldn't let her be good. That's the unfortunate situation Mac Clarke, the heroine of "The Good Bad Girl," the Columbia drama coming to the Palace Theater on Wednesday and Thursday, finds herself in.

How she overpowers the forces working against her comprises a picture that approaches the popular gangster theme from the woman's angle. It is said to be a really powerful character analysis of a woman who wanted to quit a racket and grab a little decent happiness for herself. Thus a human interest story of a woman's emotional struggle is interwoven with a powerful story of the machinations of the underworld. However, it is said that the gangster element is kept in the background; the stress being laid on the woman in the story.

Mac Clarke, who scored such a tremendous success in the role of "Molly" in "The Front Page," plays the part of "the good bad girl." James Hall is cast as the young man who offers her all that is beautiful in life while Robert Ellis is the brutal gangster who tries to prevent her having it. Others in the picture are Marie Prevost, Paul Porcasi, Nance O'Neil and Edmund Breese. Roy William Neill was given the directorial sway.

GEM

"The Honor of the Family," one of Balzac's driest stories—comes in ultra-modern garb to the screen of the Gem Theater next Sunday and Monday. The picture, featuring Bebe Daniels, Warren William and Alan Mowbray is a First National release and was filmed on an ambitious scale. "The Honor of the Family" was Otis Skinner's most successful stage vehicle. The plot involves the efforts of a flashing, romantic young soldier to save his wealthy uncle from the intrigues of a charming young actress, with whom later he himself falls in love.

Cecil Cunningham, Greta Garbo and Clark Gable in "Susan Lennox (Her Fall and Rise)" at the Fayette Wednesday and Thursday.

Lilyan Tashman, William Boyd, featured principals in the Paramount screen thriller, "Murder by the Clock", at the Fayette next Friday and Saturday.

S. M. TAGGART DIES SATURDAY

For Years Engaged in Banking at Jeffersonville

Silas M. Taggart, 73, for many years engaged in the banking business in Jeffersonville until forced to retire on account of poor health, several years ago, passed away at Grant Hospital, Saturday morning at four o'clock, following an operation for hernia performed at the hospital Friday afternoon.

Mr. Taggart had been a resident and prominent in business and social circles in Jeffersonville for about 45 years, and for many years was cashier of the Citizens Bank of that place.

Mr. Taggart was also prominent in fraternal circles, and particularly in Masonic circles.

For the past few years he had been in ill health, part of the time moving about in a wheel chair.

One of the best known residents of Jeffersonville, he had a wide circle of friends and business acquaintances at many points outside of his home town, and particularly in this city.

He was a resident of the Rainsboro community before moving to Columbus.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Taggart, who for more than 30 years has been president of the Fayette County Women's Christian Temperance Union, and by three sons and one daughter; Charles, of Chicago; Joseph, of Toledo, Dana, of New York, and Mrs. Justin Owens, of near Jeffersonville.

The body was taken in charge by Funeral Director S. C. Morrow and removed from the hospital to his late home in Jeffersonville.

Funeral arrangements were delayed until arrival of the sons.

HURT IN GAME

Portsmouth, Ohio, (AP)—Denver Hale, 19, of Maloney, Ky., suffered concussion of the brain and a possible skull fracture during a high school football game Friday. Hale, fullback on the McCall high team of Fullerton, Ky., was kicked in the head. He was brought to a hospital here.

HUNTING SEASON BEGINS MONDAY

Fewer Hunters to Take Field on Opening Day

Monday is the opening day of the hunting season, and indications are that the number of hunters on the opening day, while reaching into large figures, will not be as great as on the opening day in some recent years, the number of licenses showing a decrease.

As a ruling permits hunters to begin earlier than usual Monday morning and hunt later in the evening, caution is being urged on the part of hunters to prevent accidents occurring while hunting in the uncertain light.

The bag limit for pheasants is two cock birds in one day. Hen pheasants are protected, and the fine for killing them is $25 to $200 and the costs.

Five rabbits in a single day is the bag limit, and sales of wild rabbits may be made only during the open season.

Public Health authorities again have warned against "rabbit fever" or tularemia, and hunters are cautioned against handling slow moving rabbits which appear to be sick.

Mortality rate of tularemia among the human family is high, and so far this year 31 cases of the disease have been reported in Ohio.

Present hunting ends November 24. Rabbits may be killed until January 1.

Fox, mink, opossum, raccoon and skunk may be taken from November 15 to January 15, and muskrats also, except in the Lake Erie trapping district, the muskrat season opening December 1 and closing next March 15.

SURVIVORS OF SHIPWRECK NOW SAFE AT COLON DESCRIBE HORRORS OF FACING STARVATION WHILE ADRIFT ON CARRIBBEAN

RED CROSS RELIEF DRIVE HERE SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon between the hours of 1:00 and 3:00 more than 200 solicitors will make the long-heralded drive for funds and Red Cross membership to meet any possible demands from indigent and needy families in Fayette county during the cold winter months. They hope to be able to pour at least $5350 into the relief fund when they report.

Plans for the concentrated canvass were perfected after long and thorough study by the Emergency Relief Committee headed by Col. Rell G. Allen and the workers were instructed at a special called meeting at the Fayette Theatre Friday afternoon.

The committee set its $5350 goal after an investigation of possible needs. Then it was decided to concentrate the drive to reach it into a two-hour canvass on Sunday afternoon.

Each of the workers has been assigned to one square or its equivalent. All the homes in the assignment are to be called on. Word has been spread that those not expecting to be at home when the solicitor calls should leave their contribution with some committee-man or officials of the local Red Cross.

Although little difficulty in completing the drive successfully in the city within the allotted time is expected, more time has been given for the solicitation through the rural districts where the workers have been assigned to sections conforming closely to the political subdivisions.

NOT GUILTY IS PLEA OF MAIL ORDER ROMEO WIFE HAS LOST FAITH

where criminal court sessions are being held. His lips were drawn tightly, and he made no comment to the officers.

Only a few persons were around the jail, the public having no intimation of the time the man was to be arraigned. The prisoner was guarded closely by state and county officers.

A crowd gathered at the federal building and state police formed a cordon around it while Powers was in court. There was no demonstration among the spectators.

Entangled in the web of tragedy spun about Powers and his family, Mrs. Luella Strathair Powers, wife of the man who signed a confession that he killed two women and three children, has struck back at him.

The woman whose letters to Powers before their marriage indicate that she herself was one of his matrimonial agency clients has deserted her husband as he near trial for life.

Defiant she faced police the day after Powers signed a confession that he had slain Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and Mrs. Dorothy Lemke and three of Mrs. Eicher's children and buried their bodies in a ditch. Defiant she tried to bar the doors of their home against intrusion of investigators.

"I still love him," she told newspaper reporters when asked if she intended to stand by Powers in the face of evidence that he had carried on affairs with hundreds of women throughout the country. But under technical arrest in her home and under constant vigilance of police Mrs. Powers has turned against him. She fears him, she says.

"I am through with him," she has repeated in the last few weeks. "I wouldn't have him released for millions."

Rife in hand, the 45-year-old woman who with her sister, Miss Belle Strother, runs the store she and Powers set up here, fought off the first investigators, routed reporters and defied a mob. She burst into fury at the suggestion that she, too, had met Powers through his activities as the operator of a matrimonial agency.

However, letters she penned to Powers in the days of his courtship came to light as police delved into his trunks and other belongings at the garage on the "murder farm."

In 1926 she wrote: "I don't think it's any harm to get acquainted by this method, as I would rather find my true love in this way as I don't care for any of the Clarksburg men."

This letter was addressed to Harry Powers in Crestline, O. In the same letter she described herself:

"I have fine character, light brown hair and hazel eyes, fair complexion, wear glasses, five feet six inches tall and weighed 160 pounds the last time, and I will be 40 years old the fifth of next month."

She apparently had not met Powers personally yet for she added:

"Oh, that sweet and dear little photo. You certainly are a fine looking gentleman, and I think awfully sweet and would be a real prize. I'm sorry but I haven't got any pictures of any kind."

This letter was signed Luella B. Strother.

She and Powers were married June 1, 1927 in Oakland, Md.

March 19, 1928, Powers was given power of attorney with the right to dispose of property belonging to Mrs. Powers and her sister. A short time before the killings were disclosed Powers told friends "the girls" (Mrs. Powers and her sister) were anxious to sell their property. He intimated they intended to go west.

Now the wife of the man who soon is to go on trial says she intends to remain in Clarksburg and to continue the business she established.

While Mrs. Powers has admitted she knew he was "writing to a lot of women," she insists she knew nothing of his activities as a matrimonial agent.

AVIATRIX FAILS IN SPEED EFFORT

Detroit, Nov. 14.—(P)—Miss Maud Irving Tait, Springfield, Mass., society girl aviatrix, failed in another attempt at a new world speed record today by a narrow margin, driving her Gee Bee monoplane over a measured course at a speed of 214.92 miles an hour.

To establish a new record Miss Tait was required to make a speed of 215.6 miles an hour, or 5 miles an hour faster than the record held by Miss Ruth Nichols.

FLASHES OF LIFE

New Philadelphia, O.—(P)—The flip of a coin has decided two election contests here in which two candidates for each found themselves with the same number of votes. J. L. Huprich's guess was good and he will be clerk of the village of Baltic. His opponent was A. P. Todd outguessed C. H. Vinkon to become a member of the Baltic board of public affairs.

Athens, Ga.—It seems they know all about Catfish Smith everywhere but in the home city of the Georgia University football team on which he is a brilliant end. A postcard addressed only with a drawing of a catfish and the word "Georgia" had no trouble moving through the mails until it arrived here. Then the post office sent it to the fish market.

New York—Senator Royal S. Soper has a plan to have idle ships help idle men. He has written to the shipping board proposing that vessels out of commission since the war, lying at New York piers, be converted into habitation for the homeless.

Buffalo, N. Y.—(P)—Albert Northrop is convinced money actually does circulate. He put his initials in a new five cent piece about 30 years ago and gave it to a street car conductor. Now he has it back via the corner grocery.

TRADITION OF SEA UPHELD AS OWNERS GO DOWN WITH SHIP

Stories of Wreck and Rescue Told by Men Who Survive Ordeal

Baiboa, C. Z., Nov. 13.—(P)—A tale of traditions of the sea, of the two owners of the ill-fated Costa Rican schooner Baden, who scuttled lifeboats and rafts, and went down with their ship was told by the eleven survivors on board the U. S. minesweeper Swan on the way back to the main one.

The men were Hans J. Lau, of Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, and Adolph Schoenck, of Hamburg, Germany. When the vessel foundered Monday afternoon in heavy seas and the crew took to lifeboats and rafts the owners stayed aboard and sank the schooner.

How three others aboard the schooner lost their lives, was not revealed.

During a storm along the coast of Columbia Monday the cargo shifted, the pumps were found to be out of order and the vessel sank in 20 minutes.

Without food and with only rain to provide drinking water, the crew drifted for three days, until they were picked up by the Swan. They were sighted 20 minutes after the ship went down by an airplane pilot, but he could not take them aboard because of the roughness of the sea.

When the Swan came alongside Captain Walters of the Baden, who was injured, was taken aboard on a stretcher. The members of the crew were hauled in, bathed and given soup, cigars and clothes.

Captain Walters was injured when a timber fell on his back as he was abandoning the ship.

FACE STARVATION

Colon Panama, Nov. 14.—(P)—Eleven survivors of the crew of the motor ship Baden which foundered off the Colombian coast, Monday, rested today and recounted the experience of three days and nights in a storm-tossed open boat, facing starvation.

Twenty minutes after the freighter went down and they had seen a second life boat overturn carrying five of their comrades to their deaths, the eleven heard the comforting drone of an airplane, they said.

Cheered by the prospect of a quick rescue they momentarily forgot that they had but little food and no water, as the Baden sank so quickly they had scarcely time to clear ship. Two cans of beans and cheese, and a single banana comprised their rations.

But when hours wore into days and they had parceled out the last of their rations, when chills and fever spread among the occupants of the boat and they found themselves fighting a losing fight against the seas which swept over their craft, they began to despair.

Captain Hewitt Walters, Mobile, Ala., recovering at Colon hospital from severe injuries suffered as he was leaving the sinking freighter, said he had endeavored to keep hope alive among his men by assuring them they must have been seen by the plane and that rescue surely was on the way.

When they were finally sighted by the United States minesweeper Swan, the weary starving men dropped to their knees and thanked God for saving them, Captain Walters said.

They were given warm food and dry clothing.

They confirmed earlier reports that Hans J. Lau and Adolph Schoenck, owners of the Baden, were among the five lost.

The lost ship, which in 1926 made a trip across the Atlantic powered by wind motors, but which had been equipped with motors since being put into freight service had a cargo of salt in the hold when it sank, Captain Walters said.

MOTHER OF SLAIN YOUTH DOES NOT WISH KILLER'S EXECUTION

Mrs. Donaldson said it was understood, after her pre-marriage status had been explained to the Allens that the couple were to marry as soon as young Donaldson was able to support a wife.

Horace Allen, meanwhile, was reported critically ill at the home of friends where he and his daughter are staying. He suffered a nervous breakdown Thursday night and was unable to attend an inquest yesterday.

Miss Allen herself remained away working a jig-saw puzzle while the hearing was in progress.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that Donaldson died from a shotgun wound at the hands of Allen.

Dog First With Stepmother, Edith Riley's Brother Reveals

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Riley, Washington parents arrested charged with inflicting alleged cruelties on little Edith Riley, are shown here with their dog. According to Francis, Edith's 15-year-old brother, the dog received better treatment at the hands of Mrs. Riley than did either he or his sister.

While the dog was pampered the little girl was confined in a closet, the dog being taught to guard the door.

For four years, according to the story of Francis Riley, his little sister, Edith, was beaten, kicked and mistreated by her step-mother.

A new picture of Edith Riley, 13-year-old victim of parental cruelty, in a hospital at Washington. She is seen fondling one of the scores of dolls sent her when the story of the tortures she endured was published. Hospital authorities fear the child's mind has been impaired because of the ill treatment.

GEESE HEADED FOR THE SOUTH

During the past few days the migration of wild geese, and ducks from their feeding grounds in the Canadian lake region, has been under way, presaging the approach of cold weather.

Large flocks of the fowls have passed over Fayette county, the geese attracting attention by their V formation and the loud honks, and the geese by their squawks.

The passing of the fowls to the south recalls to many citizens the great flocks of geese that became lost in a blinding snowstorm over this community about the 22 of October a few years ago.

4,500 PRISONERS IN PENITENTIARY

There are now over 4,500 prisoners confined in the Ohio Penitentiary and recently the first death in over two months occurred at the institution, which is a splendid record considering the population, proving efficient work on the part of hospital staff and careful supervision of diet by the subsistence department. The prison is again becoming congested owing to the large number of men received from full terms of criminal court.

MANY GAMBLING DEVICES ARE TAKEN BY SHERIFF

Sheriff Minton has a collection of slot machines stored in the grand jury room, which he and his deputies recently confiscated at filling stations and stores in rural Fayette, one filling station and bar-becue having three of these gambling devices.

There are several types of the slot machines which are said to come within the ban of the law, included in the eight or ten seized by the Sheriff and deputies.

Similar devices in this city, allowed to operate by the officials, were not molested, the seizures being made in the rural area coming under the more direct jurisdiction of the Sheriff's office.

COURT CASES SHOW INCREASE FOR 1930

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 15.—According to judicial statistics made public by Secretary of State, Clarence J. Brown, there were 59,981 civil cases and 7,445 criminal cases on hand at the beginning of the statistical year of 1929 in the common pleas courts of Ohio. By the beginning of the statistical year of 1930, these figures had increased to 63,870 and 9,355 respectively. The increase in criminal cases far exceeded, proportionately, the increase in civil suits. The total number of cases during the 1929 period, of 164,609, jumped by 6.29 per cent during the next year to 174,972 cases. This increase is about twice the estimated population increase during the same period.

Our Congratulations

In effecting a settlement, so far as the sureties are concerned, of the bonds given to secure the deposit of the county funds in the failed Ohio State Bank, the county commissioners have done a splendid work. They have by that settlement secured a sum of money now, when it is needed, let us hope, more than it ever will be again. They have lifted a cloud which has hung over the community since the bank failure, they have avoided the danger of financial disaster to many which would have brought about another financial crisis. They have avoided years of costly litigation, the ultimate outcome of which was exceedingly uncertain.

In effecting the settlement the commissioners were actuated solely by the desire to do what was best for the community, in view of all the facts, some of which were surprising when revealed by close investigation.

Their action blazes the trail for other officials who face the same problems.

Officials must courageously ascertain, and face the real facts and act for the best interests of all. Progressive citizens should not be held back by the pendency of claims impossible to realize.

We have drifted along now for more than a year and a half with nothing definite done, until the commissioners' action on Monday. The time has come to reach an accord and clear away the financial debris.

This community has rallied splendidly from its especial financial disasters.

However, there are yet a few financial clouds hovering oppressively over the community, clouds which could be and should be lifted. Whether we get rid of these menaces, or not, and how soon, depends, almost wholly upon our officials.

To permit these menacing clouds to remain will result in holding back progress and, possibly, disasters which will reflect themselves to the disadvantage of the entire community.

We have great confidence in our public officials. We have chosen them from among our own community. They are cognizant of conditions and needs and they should not be deterred by loose talk of the ill advised nor the enviously inclined.

We have, thus far, exhibited a fine community spirit, a fine regard for the rights of others and an appreciation of the value, to the community, of each worth while human unit in this community.

Doers and Talkers

Broadly speaking, men who get into the public eye are divided into two classes—the blowers and the doers. The blowers are always telling what they are going to do and sometimes doing it. The doers let what they do speak for them.

While other people were doing a lot of talking about the trans-Atlantic flying they were going to do, Lindbergh came hopping across the country unheralded, casually remarked upon his arrival in New York that he might try the jump, and almost as casually hopped off and reached his goal. And he has said very little about it since.

A little earlier in the history of aviation, when the North Pole was the goal of fliers, a great racket was made by several groups preparing for the attempt. In the midst of it all, and almost before the public was aware of his plans, Commander Byrd completed the polar flight.

Life itself tends to confirm Lincoln's comparison of the big-talk man to the river steamer with the enormous whistle. When it whistled it had to stop running and when it ran it had to stop whistling.

The candidate for public office who makes the most noise and promises does not always prove to be the best public servant. Neither is the best community booster always the fastest and loudest talker. Community builders are doers, not blowers. They are the deep waters and full vessels. Somebody to talk it up when the work slackens is an asset to the progressive city or town, but the real work is done by those who have more to do than say.

OLD CHAMPION OF SILVER IS IN LIMELIGHT

Republican from Oregon Cites Six Reasons for "Remonetization" of White Metal

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, Nov. 14.—It would be a joke on the present generation (wouldn't it?) if, after two decades of retirement, Jonathan Bourne, Jr., beaten in 1912 for a second term in the U. S. senate from Oregon were to loom up formidably in public life again as he approaches his 77th birthday. Yet one hears it suggested. Bimetallism's revival as a political issue is the development which has brought the Oregonian into the foreground once more recently.

Senator Bourne was a notable silver Republican in the 1890's.

Modern advocates of the white metal's remonetization, delving into past records for the utterances of the fathers of their creed were not long in discovering that the old Pacific coast statesman's were among the most authoritative.

As the ex-senator still is in the land of the living, naturally they turned to him personally.

Age by no means has dampened his fire.

The United States' says the veteran bimetallist, "can, should and within three years will, without the necessitated assent or co-operation of any other nation, remonetize silver on the basis of 16-to-1. Weaker-kneed moderns speak of 20-to-1."

Ex-Senator Bourne sounds the original 16-to-1 slogan.

"Under what is known as remonetization of silver at 16-to-1," he continues, "the government does not purchase the silver or the gold. It simply receives the bullion at the mint. After that it is brought to the proper standard of fineness for coins and if the bullion requires to be refined the government makes a charge equal to the cost of bringing it to standard fineness; that is, nineteenth fine. Then the government puts its stamp on each piece and turns the coins over to the depositor. That is all there is to it."

"Or the government may, if it has the coin on hand, at once deliver it to the depositor of bullion, but in no proper sense does it buy the bullion, nor become its owner. The bullion and the coin made from it belong to the depositor."

"Of course, on account of the greater convenience of paper, separate provision is required for the issue of notes, dollar for dollar, for coin or bullion, which in that case the government holds in trust for whomever holds the notes or certificates."

"In our United States coinage 23.22 grains of fine gold constitute a dollar, or $20.67 per fine ounce; and 371.25 grains of fine silver should constitute a dollar, or $1.29, 29 per ounce."

"Legal tender is that currency, circulating medium or description of money which by law a debtor

Modern Fish Story

When little Marie Linden of Los Angeles decided to go fishing, she concluded that the handiest place was the gold fish bowl. Mr. Goldfish, of the Japanese butterfly variety, was hungry, so he swallowed the hook which, in this case, was a safety pin. A veterinarian was consulted. He X-rayed the victim, removed the open pin and now says Mr. Goldfish will live to tell of his experience.

may offer and a creditor must accept in payment of debts. It is, in fact, the life or essence of money and without it good money could not exist.

"There is no such thing as intrinsic value."

"Silver was not demonetized because of its over-production."

"The world's accredited records show that since the discovery of America down to and including 1929, a period of more than 434 years, 1,041,232,774 fine ounces of gold and 14,729,598,697 fine ounces of silver were produced."

"Because of the unlimited demand for its monetary use, in conjunction with its limited supply, gold has a fixed value of $20.67 per ounce as measured by itself, but a steadily increasing value in its exchangeability for all other commodities. The same principle would apply to silver if the same unlimited demand for its use as money on the basis of $1.29 per ounce were created for it by free coinage legislation by the United States alone, regardless of other countries."

"I challenge intelligent criticism," says the ex-senator, "of the statement that the remonetization of silver at 16-to-1 would:

"1. Immediately double the volume of the world's primary money, thus adding a resultant increased credit basis of 20 times the amount of primary money to the world's stock."

"2. More than double, within one year, prices of the world's wheat, cotton and, sympathetically, all other agricultural products."

"3. Check our present tendency toward wage reductions, and, within two or three years, develop a tendency toward increased wages throughout the United States."

"4. Steadily increase our foreign trade by helping China, India, Russia, Mexico and the South American republics."

"5. Do more to revive, encourage, vitalize and resuscitate business in this country and throughout the world than could be accomplished by any single step taken by the United States and the world in general."

"6. Almost immediately increase the activity and market values of securities, especially the common stocks of all honestly, efficiently managed and properly financed corporations listed on the country's great stock exchanges, and, probably, within two or three years, advance their prices above those attained before the debacle of 1929 and 1930."

THE OTHER SELVES

In this one self that I believe my own,
How many selves, like moonlit ghosts, reside!
What kings and war chiefs flash in created pride;
What captives curse, what burning martyrs moan;
What beaten slaves pile high funeral stone;
What beggars fawn, what studded nobles stride;
What priests declaim, what skull-marked outlaws ride
To meet furred victims on night moors alone!

All, all are one—the warrior, thief and sage,
The serf, the baron, and a myriad more!

All are myself, and what I am they bore
In what they were, when in some other age

And other lives they were the masks I wore,
Each for one act upon time's troubled stage.

High Spots In Ohio History

By J. H. GALBRAITH

The idea of establishing a colony in Ohio, which finally led to the founding of Worthington, originated in the mind of John Fitch who is now generally credited with making the first successful application of steam power to the propulsion of water craft—instead of Robert Fulton. After hardships and reverses in his youth and early manhood, James Kilbourne, who became the leader in the Worthington movement, had achieved remarkable success in business in Connecticut and began to look for a western location in which he might make better use of his business ability of which he now felt quite well assured.

He made two inspection trips through the west, but went no farther than central New York and Pennsylvania. He was better impressed with New York state and had about made up his mind to locate there, when his attention was turned to the Ohio country by Mr. Fitch, who was his father-in-law. Fitch had passed through the southern part of the Ohio country on his way to Kentucky and he was impressed that there were to be great opportunities in the new state about to be created out of the Northwest territory.

This idea he emphasized in his talk with Colonel Kilbourne and the result was that Kilbourne selected eight men of his acquaintance to join in the project and with them outlined the provisions of the company's charter. They decided to expand the company to 40 persons, to be selected with the approval of all the original eight, and in the early part of 1802 Kilbourne, who was selected to explore the country and select a site, started for the Ohio country.

He went by stage coach as far as Shippensburg, Pa. There was no common carrier beyond that point. On foot he made his way across the mountains, reaching Pittsburgh in two weeks. Without stopping he set out through the wilds of Ohio, but because of an old rheumatic trouble developing from sleeping in the open at night, he found it necessary to buy a horse upon which the rest of his journey was made. He no doubt used the Zanesville for part of the way. He probably covered the central and southern portions of the state pretty well, but there is no detailed record of his route. The Worthington site he selected and returning, his associates perfected the organization as soon as the Ohio constitution was adopted.

MODERN ANGEL OF MERCY

A NEW YORKER AT LARGE

By WILLIAM GAINES

NEW YORK—The chestnut vendors are with us again, the pleasant aroma of roasted nuts perfuming many a Manhattan corner.

No one who ever saw "The Auctioneer" with David Warfield, ever sees a chestnut merchant without thinking of that delightful bit of acting by the late Tony Bevan.

Off stage, Bevan was Warfield's companion, looking after the star with all the concern a mother exhibits toward her child.

Lucrezia Bori, the soprano, came back from Europe the other day, mourning the loss of her dog, Rowdy.

While abroad she missed the companionship of Rowdy and had him sent to her. In Switzerland, the pup couldn't stand the cold and contracted pneumonia. Bori had the dog cremated and brought back the ashes to be buried on her estate.

BARGAIN RACKET

The financial plight of many of the elite clothing shops in the wealthier shopping districts has proved a money-making boom for less scrupulous merchants from the bargain sections.

Should one of the well known stores find itself in a position where there is nothing to do except quit, the chances are that its stock and quarters will be taken over by one of the dry goods boys from downtown.

The goods from the swanky counters are set up for sale at slashed prices and customers congratulate themselves that they are getting quality clothes with so little damage to the bank roll.

What the customers don't know is that sifted among the good bargains are a number of garments of inferior quality which have been brought uptown to the sale—and that their "sale price" actually is much more than their true worth.

It is simply a variation of putting the biggest and best strawberries on top of the basket.

THE annual Garden Club picnic, at the Federated club room, Friday noon, chronicled its usual pleasurable "get-together" of members interested in flower growing and in the promoting of landscape gardening, home flower gardens, planting of various kinds and whatever adds to the beauty of town and home in ornamental horticulture.

The indoor picnic was one of great bountifulness and the most appetizing of home cooked viands—large trays of fried chicken, delicious home baked cakes and everything to tempt the most jaded appetite.

A number of dinners were taken to members confined to their homes by illness. Miss May M. Duffee gave an interesting report of the State Convention in Columbus.

The hour around the long table was extremely jolly and the members lingered afterwards for informal discussion of club business and visiting.

The picnic was in charge of Mrs. Earl McCoy, first vice president; Mrs. Rell G. Allen, second vice president; Mrs. Val R. McCoy, treasurer; Mrs. Edgar Coll, secretary.

The absence of the president, Miss Gertrude Gardner, caused much regret and the generally expressed hope that another year would bring to her recovered health.

The first grade of the Sunnyside school had an unusual enrollment when it opened in September—33 boys and 29 girls—more than a third of whom had drifted in from other places—coming from Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, Chillicothe, Greenfield, Jackson, Akron, Hanging Rock, Pittsburgh and other cities, as well as from other parts of Washington Court House and from the country. The newcomers were given a warm welcome but in view of the crowded conditions and the depleted treasury of the city schools the situation seemed appalling until the emergency was met by the generosity of the Washington people. A long table was borrowed from Miss Marie Hughes' fourth grade; chairs were loaned by Mrs. Mary K. Hixon's second grade; Superintendent St. Clair and the Board of Education promptly furnished books and all needed supplies for eighteen children. The Wesley Chapel Mite Society, of which Mrs. O. S. Tobin is president, voted to sponsor the welfare work in the first grade of the Sunnyside school by furnishing underwear and clothing as it had done in previous years. Mrs. Wesley McMurray and Mrs. Frank Dellinger gave ready-made clothing for the immediate necessity. Through the personal interest of Mrs. Anna L. ## LIVING AND LOVING

BY VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: I'm a young girl 18 years of age. Three years ago, in high school, I was considered one of the most popular girls, and I fell in love—if I may call it that—with one of the most popular boys.

"We were devoted to each other for exactly a year, then someone more fortunate than I came along. I left school and went to another city.

"Since then I've seen and known many men, but I can't seem to care for any one as I did for my high school chum and pal. I'm back home now, and I'm sure I don't care for him any more, but it seems something has been killed within me. For three years I've tried to care for someone, but every time I find I'm only fooling myself.

"The last month I've met a charming boy of 19, but I'm dreadfully frightened for fear I'd grow to love him. I'm avoiding him as much as possible. But what I want to know is, do you think I'll ever care for anyone as I have this schoolyard sweetheart.

"M. C."

I am sure you will learn to care for someone in the course of time, dear, and your love may be much more discriminating than it was in your school days.

Some folk love many times and lightly. Others take the matter much more seriously and it takes a long time to get over one love affair, even though said affair may have been of the "calf" or "puppy" love variety. You are, of course, of the latter type. Your love affair made a very deep impression on you and one not likely to pass for some time.

As you take them so to heart, I think you are wise not to see too much of this second young man who may win your heart only to become indifferent, because he is not yet old enough to "know his own mind," as they say.

I hope Mr. Right Man will come along some day, and when you meet him you will only remember this schoolgirl affair as your first love affair, very sweet and dear, an experience you would not have missed, but not to be compared to the real love of your life.

Failures think Easy street is full of road hogs.

Dear Diary.

Story of a Girl who went to New York for Fame and Fortune
By ETHELDA BEDFORD
RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

MONDAY NIGHT.
DEAR DIARY: I was thinking how blond Nate's velvet jacket made his hair. I was wondering if some girl who had been terribly in love with him had embroidered those big golden N's on the toes of his velvet slippers.

You know, back home, Diary, men didn't wear velvet jackets and velvet slippers. But in New York, that must be the thing for an evening in his home.

How could I turn the conversation to something about which I might talk intelligently? I don't know a touchdown from a kickoff. Why did they keep talking about football? (I knew, though—because I'd seemed so embarrassed when they talked of me.) I picked up my glass.

"Say, now, you've acquired a habit since you've been dashing about with this chap, Paul, haven't you?" Nate said. I hadn't thought he noticed me, sitting on the low stool in front of the fire place.

"No—I haven't," I said, placing the glass again on the glass-topped table near.

"Don't let me stop you—I just thought I recalled your refusing once before—"

"You remember—that?" I was pleased.

"I remember," and his eyes told me he had not forgotten many other little things that I've thought sort of foolish of me to keep remembering—

"Say—" broke in Paul, moving a little in his chair. "Is this a long-time love affair I've stumbled in on?"

"You tell him, Nate," I said, "about—"

"About us?" Nate finished the sentences.

I felt my face color at that. It sounded as if we had lots to tell—

"About our—how you knew me," I said it hurriedly.

"When she says 'our' she doesn't mean 'our love affair' as you suggested, Paul. I don't think she's ever been in love... there's something about her eyes, you know."

"I know, I know," as if he didn't at all.

"What do you know—about my eyes? Either of you?" I asked, hoping I didn't look as embarrassed as I felt.

"They're beautiful, I know that," Nate turned to the cellarette again.

"Yes, you'd know that, all right," answered Paul.

"You've evidently felt the power of them yourself," Nate said.

"Does he know you've had screen test?" Paul asked me.

"I think I told him—I meant to—"

Nate looked a little angry at that, Diary. "Oh, you did!" he said, as if he resented hearing of it. "Could he be jealous?... I don't understand him at all..."

COXEY MARCHES ON

Massillon, O., Wonders if Elderly Crusader, Just Elected Its Mayor, Can Lift Town From Financial Straits.

DAY'S ACTIVITIES IN WALL STREET
By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The stock market experienced another setback today, but managed to recover a little in the late trading, as better support appeared in the wheat market.

Rails again dragged the list down, and Radio and Keith broke about a point to new lows, reflecting indications of a stockholders' controversy over the proposed reorganization of Radio Keith.

Net losses in shares ranged from 1 to 4 points in many issues at the finish, but final prices were generally from fractions to a point above the lowest of the morning.

The closing tone was heavy. The turnover for the short session was around a million shares.

Selling of the rails apparently reflected further discussion of the prospect of dividend reductions, and fears that relief from the proposed rate increases and wage reductions would be deferred.

Whether the changes in the Interstate Commerce Commission's conditional rate increase suggested by the railway executives yesterday will hold up relief from that quarter remains to be seen. Although the executives have appointed a committee to confer with labor heads, no early agreement on wages is generally expected in Wall street.

Wall street's reaction to President Hoover's suggestion of a system of mortgage discount banks were generally favorable, but it had little influence on the share market. Johns Manville, American Radiator, and Sears Roebuck, which do large businesses in building materials, showed a little momentary firmness.

Shares closing about 2 to 4 points lower included New York Central, which again penetrated new low ground, New Haven, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Norfolk and Western, American Telephone, Dapont and Coca Cola. U. S. Steel lost a point, net.

FEDERAL BANK SYSTEM TO AID HOME BUILDING

the boom years.

"But even in these localities the inevitable need is obscured by the tendency of the population to huddle temporarily due to unemployment. The real need steadily accumulates with increasing population and will become evident and insistent as we come out of the depression."

Here are some elements of the President's proposal:

One bank would be established in each of the 12 Federal Reserve districts, if necessary.

Each would be capitalized initially at from $5,000,000 to $30,000,000.

In order to restrict the aid to smaller homes and farms, no mortgage loan of over $15,000 would be eligible for collateral.

Each bank would be allowed to issue bonds for short term notes to investors, not to exceed in aggregate 12 times the capital of the bank.

The initial capital would be subscribed by the institutions to participate, as was done with the Federal Reserve banks, with the government subscribing any amount not thus provided.

Mr. Hoover said these details were put forward merely as suggestions. The entire plan, he added, would be subject to the action of Congress and many parts might need development.

SCHOOLING IN OHIO IS NOW IN DANGER

er works in numerous cities.

The opinion said bond issues should be considered to have carried if they received 55 per cent of the vote in each municipality concerned. The new law requires 60 per cent approval. Bettman said the issues were projected before the new law became effective, and that hence the law then effective still governed.

F. D. Stewart, assistant chief engineer of the sanitary engineering division of the State Department of Health, said several bond issues for sewer works could be considered to have passed under the ruling.

Chief among them was Washington Court House, of which F. H. Waring, chief engineer, earlier has said seemed a hopeless situation. A similar situation was felt to prevail at Mechanicsburg.

The Department has been investigating to determine what might be done to compel construction of sewer systems where bond issues apparently were defeated.

GRAIN MARKET NEWS SUMMARY

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN

Chicago, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Tumultuous selling today for recent buyers of wheat slashed prices down to about half of the gains which had been scored at the beginning of this week. Houses with eastern connections were especially prominent in the selling. Final prices showed only a slight recovery from the day's bottom figures. Setbacks since Monday amounted to more than 12 cents a bushel on wheat, 11 cents on rye, and 8 cents on corn. Rains beneficial to United States new winter wheat crop induced much of the selling, although western Kansas received but little moisture.

Wheat closed unsettled, 2 to 2 1/2c lower than yesterday's finish, corn 1/4 to 1c down, oats 1/4 to 1/2c off, and provisions at 5 to 20 cents decline.

Liverpool reports that Russian spot wheat was again a weight on the market put bulls under a handicap. Word, however, that rains in Kansas west of Pratt were only scattered and light tended to stimulate buying after wheat had touched as low as 10 1/2 cents under its recent high point. Rallies ensued, but for the time being were fractional. It was confirmed that France had agreed one third of her wheat imports would be taken from Yugoslavia, and that a similar agreement was expected between Germany and Yugoslavia.

Argentina crop developments had a bullish character. Too much rain was reported in northern and central Argentina. The harvest is on in the north and is beginning in the north center. Excess of rain over this region was regarded as threatening damage. Corn and oats responded somewhat to wet weather, but at times were sympathetic with wheat price setbacks.

Provisions kept inactive.

PUG RENTNER

BIG SHOT FOR PURPLE

Sensational Long Gallops Put His Team at Top of Big Ten Race

AND HOW HE CAN PASS

Not Bad as Receiver of Long Forwards

By JOHN W. STAHR

Chicago —(AP)—With two mates who last year helped execute many of his dramatic touchdown sallies gone, Ernest "Pug" Rentner this fall has taken to "carrying the mail" personally for Northwestern.

His brilliant, long runs for touchdowns in early games, notably against Nebraska and Ohio State, have convinced Purple rooters that the lanky Joliet, Ill., youth is as great a ball carrier as he was a passer in the few big games he played in 1930 before injuring his arm.

Rentner has figured in an amazing proportion of the touchdown plays of every game he has been in for the Wildcats, either as thrower or runner.

Last year on his second scrimmage play in Big Ten competition Rentner zipped a 30 yard pass to Lee Hanley for a touchdown against Ohio.

A nine yard toss to Frank Baker, his other favorite collaborator in such affairs, and a 50 yard run with an intercepted Buckeye pass were his other principal exploits in that flashy debut.

Against Illinois he whipped two more passes to Baker for touchdowns, and in the Minnesota game, his last that season, he was on the trigger end of two more sensational aerial plays.

One of these was a flank forward lateral, Rentner to Baker to Hanley, that shook the Wildcat quarter loose for a 72 yard jaunt.

With Hanley and Baker graduated this year, Rentner started off in a hurry to cross as many goal lines as possible on foot.

In the first quarter of the opening game with Nebraska he was the final recipient of the ball in a forward lateral maneuver and scooped 37 yards to score. A few minutes later he whirled 66 yards from scrimmage for another.

Against Ohio State he provided the break that turned a hard-fought game to the Purple when he ran 50 yards from scrimmage through the Buckeyes, and he signalized the rout of Illinois with a 66 yard touchdown gallop on the fifth play of that game.

The next week in the Northwestern victory over Minnesota, which virtually clinched the Big Ten championship, Rentner ran back a kickoff 95 yards to a touchdown and later galloped 80 yards to another in running back a punt.

Cold statistics, to say nothing of the dash and fire he puts into the game and into his mates, indicate Rentner's right to a place among the gridiron greats.

In his first four games this year he gained 361 yards from scrimmage in 55 tries, an average of 5.47 yards per carry. In addition he performed sensationally in returning 17 punts for 234 yards, an average of nearly 14 yards per return.

Seven completed passes out of 25 he tossed in those four games earned an additional 185 yards, though his tossing this year has been eclipsed by his rambling.

Blue and White Crew "Clicks" in Scientific Play Against Stubborn Foe—New Double Wing Back Formations Result in an Effective Offensive

All's well that ends well. These immortal words express the record of the past season for Washington Hi's football team. Although losing seven straight games the Blue Lions turned the tables in their last two games and walked off with victories.

The last of these was at Frankfort on Friday afternoon. In a see-saw battle over the mud-covered turf the roaring Lions put up a good fight in their final battle of the 1931 season. The final count was 13 to 6, all of this scoring coming in the last half.

The crippled Washington eleven with several of its best players on the sidelines most of the time because of recent injuries, played a "tag" game with its hosts. The Blue and White was "it" in the first quarter and the last half, succumbing to a vicious attack by the ramping Wildcats during the second period. It was less than a couple of minutes before the intermission when the "small but mighty" forces of the Ross county school got into action and were able to make a touchdown.

Sewing the game up sufficiently before the initial period closed, the boys of Blue and White took things

Craig Team Leads Bowling Scramble With Clean Slate

The Craig Brothers Co. bowling team has managed to keep its slate clean in the Y. M. C. A. league against some stubborn opposition to hold the lead of section A. The next four teams in the loop are on even terms with 6 victories and 3 defeats. The three teams in the tail end of the race are teams that have, in the past, been always near the top but due to stiff opposition and failure of members to locate the head pin they have not yet been able to get going at full speed.

In section B of the league, the race is much closer and no team has been able to beat back the opposition with complete success. The Williams Contractors are now out in front but they are being hard pressed by the next four. The Finley Drugists and Reeder Printers hold down the cellar position together but are far from being counted out of the race.

My WINNING PLAY

The University of Texas, 1930 champions of the Southwest conference, has found the going tough this season. But their southwest-ern foes have found the Longhorns hard to stop. In this, the eleventh of a series of football articles written by outstanding coaches themselves, Clyde Littlefield, Texas coach, described an off tackle dash that has netted his team numerous long gains in the last three years.

By CLYDE LITTLEFIELD
(Head Football Coach, University of Texas)

Austin, Tex. —(AP)—I have learned one thing—instead of one winning play, a coach needs several winning plays if his team is to live up to general public expectations.

Since winning the Southwest conference title last season conference followers apparently have expected my 1931 team to win all games without much effort. While unable to do that, the following play, I hope, will help us finish near the top again this season.

Our 1931 system of football is similar to the one of last year. We use an unbalanced line with flank backs stationed in holes between ends and tackles one and a half yards back.

We use our No. 3 back, stationed to the right of center, a great deal as a spinner player. No. 4 back, located farthest to the rear and directly behind the center, is in a few plays as the spinner.

The flanking backs tend to spread the defense, giving the front line more territory to cover, but at same time also backs can get to given position in shortest length of time. The formation also gives opportunity for a passing game.

This type of offense requires careful handling of the ball and more precision in timing. It also makes it possible to build up a sequence of plays—drawing opponents out of position until you can develop your winning play.

Description of a play used from this formation when the defense is over shifting to the offensive right position to stop power plays, spinners to right tackle and fakes, follows:

The ball is snapped to our No. 3 back, who holds it in a hidden position. The right flank backs comes around quickly, takes the ball and goes outside left tackle. No. 3 back then takes buck line, as though carrying the ball and blocks. No. 4 back, from directly behind center, fakes a plunge to right tackle and then turns back

AGES TO MEET

MATCH 'CLIMAX' RUNS

When Irish and Trojans Meet at Notre Dame Next Saturday

SCHWARTZ vs. MOHLER

At Last Meeting Marchy Had All Best of It

New York —(AP)—Two of the flashiest backs in the country are going to match "climax" runs November 21, when the University of Southern California Trojans invade South Bend to take on the fast rambling Notre Dame "Irish."

One is Marchmont Schwartz, Rambler left halfback, who has been held in check only one time this year—and that on a muddy field at Chicago by a big powerfull Northwestern team. The other is Orvy Mohler, Trojan quarterback, 1930 leading scorer on the Pacific Coast and who is headed for the honor again this year.

The pair tangled last year with all of the honors falling to the "Irish" back. But nothing went right with the Trojans on that occasion, when the Ramblers won, 27 to 0, in the last game they were ever coached for by the late Knute Rockne.

Since that game both Schwartz and Mohler have taken on added duties. Schwartz now does the bulk of the punting for Notre Dame and a large share of the passing. These duties fell on him when all other members of the great 1930 Notre Dame backfield passed along.

Mohler this year also is doing some of the punting for the Trojans, having convinced Coach Howard Jones that a queer technique, something like throwing a baseball, was effective. He is a fair punter.

But it is in exploding through the line and outrunning the secondary for a touchdown when all seems quiet in midfield that both of the backs excel.

Schwartz has been almost impossible to hold without a gain this year, while Mohler, sent in after Galus Shaver, a heavier quarterback, has "softened" the opposition, has been twisting and darting to touchdowns with all of his old time abandon.

Schwartz last year was placed on The Associated Press All-American team, and it appears he will be very hard to keep out of a berth on the 1931 edition. Mohler also doubtless will come in for consideration for the team, as will Erny Pinckert, a 1930 selection, and others of the powerful backs to be seen in the game.

But the numbers the fans doubtless will be looking for on their score cards when the game gets under way will be those of Schwartz and Mohler—two of the hardest backs in the country to haul down once they've slipped through the line of scrimmage!

ALAN GOULD

COLORED GOLF SPORTS EDITOR

If Joe Doakes or Oscar Zille happened to suggest there was really no foolproof defense against the forward pass, it would draw little but a few hearty laughs. It's another and more interesting matter when Arthur Samson, Harvard's able backfield coach, writes in the Harvard A. A. News:

"A close analysis of modern football quickly reveals that there is no perfect defense for the forward pass.

"In the days before the world war a defense for the pass was a minor problem. Coaches now spend hours in perfecting the execution of this play—and it is now necessary to impart several complicated systems for defending against the pass."

After noting the obvious advantages as well as shortcomings of an exclusive "zone" or "man" to man" defense, Samson goes on:

"With exceptional players the man to man defense will work well. Notre Dame has used it with results. Cornell has used it for years but in Cornell's case it can not be said to have been entirely airtight."

"Recently a combination of these two defenses has become popular. Many coaches now teach this style and, although it is still full of loopholes, the secret of its success lies in the fact that it is difficult for the offense to discover just what the defensive assignments are in the backfield."

"What makes the defense against the pass even more complicated is the difficulty in knowing just when a pass is coming. That was what made that Michigan pass go last year (against Harvard). Newman called that touchdown play just after Michigan had made its third first down in succession by rushing. Realizing the westerners were beginning to advance by means of an off tackle play, it was only natural that on first down, the Harvard team should think another running play was due. It was logical, and turned an apparent Harvard victory into a sudden and perplexing defeat."

WOOD PROVES THEORY

Harvard, with Capt. Barry Wood directing such matters, has perhaps the most baffling passing attack in the east this season.

The Crimson has shelved most of its flashy laterals for forwards because it's most direct in gaining the objective—the opposing goal—and because Barry is the best quarterback passer since Benny Friedman was leaving 'em to Benny Oosterbaan for dear old Michigan.

On the second or third play of the game against Army, Wood completed a 50 yard pass to Bernie White, Barry's tosses to Jack Crickard and White later paved the way for two Crimson touchdowns.

Texas couldn't stop Wood's passes altogether and the Longhorns came east with a great reputation for checking the air game.

Three of Harvard's five touchdowns against Texas were due largely to passes. Yale for the last two years has been unable to stop the Crimson's "ace of the air."

WILMINGTON WINS FROM CHILICOTHE FOR CLEAN SLATE

Wilmington continued on its undefeated season on the gridiron by upsetting Chillicothe very badly on its home field. The final score of 22 to 0 only goes to show what a splendid team the Orange Hurricane eleven is this year.

Allowances must be made, however, for the fact that three or four of the main players for the losers were not able to be in the game. These included their outstanding star, Nick Holmes.

Hillsboro made a none-too-impressive showing at Circleville on Friday afternoon and eked out a 15 to 7 victory. The Roundtowners haven't been going very good this season.

The Ashland, Ky., high school football team had scored 277 points this year when their opponents had only 25.

HILLSBORO TAKES CIRCLEVILLE INTO CAMP 15 TO 7

Wilmington continued on its undefeated season on the gridiron by upsetting Chillicothe very badly on its home field. The final score of 22 to 0 only goes to show what a splendid team the Orange Hurricane eleven is this year.

Allowances must be made, however, for the fact that three or four of the main players for the losers were not able to be in the game. These included their outstanding star, Nick Holmes.

SELF DEFENSE

PLEA FREES MAN
Chillicothe, Ohio.—(AP)—Samuel Taggart, dairyman, was acquitted Friday of cutting with intent to kill Bernie Brumfield, whom he claimed made advances toward his wife. Taggart claimed self-defense.

Then he said, "Let's talk this thing out quietly. My nerves are just about shot."

He motioned for all of them to sit down. When Bruce got a chance, he said, "You've made a mistake. In the first place, I have an idea what you think. But you're wrong. In spite of the fact that Mrs. Hayes promised me she wouldn't write to you I can see that she did. Well, this isn't the girl that Mrs. Hayes wrote you about. That's your first mistake."

He knew that he was red all over. His neck was burning up. He was simply furious. He wondered whether or not he could control himself enough to go through with the explanation.

His Aunt Eleanor paid no attention to the fact that the girl who was sitting there was in no wise implicated in the affair. She went on with her trade.

"You do admit, then, that it's true. That there is a girl to whom you're engaged. Then all that Ruth wrote me is true! Oh, dear, I was hoping that I would find it was all a mistake!"

She began to weep. Mr. Durand took her hand.

"Eleanor," he said, "why don't we permit Bruce and this young woman to depart? I'm certain it is unpleasant for her and we can talk to Bruce regarding it later."

Mrs. Durand thought it over and finally consented. Before Bruce had gone out the door with Arlene, Mrs. Durand came up and apologized to her.

"I'm awfully sorry, dear," she said, "but I'm sure you'll understand how we must feel about it. We came all the way from Europe when we heard that Bruce was in trouble."

Bruce winced. It was all too unbearable! Here was Arlene getting all the information concerning his aunt's attitude toward Lois. He had a sudden desire to go back in there and in front of everyone declare his love for Lois Corbin. The more he thought about it the hotter he became. The idea of Mrs. Hayes stirring up all that trouble! He would like to make some trouble for her!

He could do it, too, if he desired. He wished nothing had happened between himself and Lois. He wanted to stand beside her through all of this, to clear her of all the accusations that had been made against her.

He took Arlene on to the country club, as he had promised but he never passed such a miserable two hours in his life. Arlene made herself more obnoxious than ever, or else she seemed that way because Bruce was so wrought up about everything. She insisted on being introduced to everyone who came near them and even asked to have "that terrible Mrs. Hayes" pointed out to her. It appeared to Bruce to be more of a matter of curiosity than anything else that Arlene wanted to see her. Certainly it was not because she was displaying any sympathy for Lois, for Arlene had not once mentioned the fact that she was sorry for Lois.

Bruce found himself defending Lois without intending to do so. "I want you to understand that Lois is innocent of all those accusations that have been made against her," he said defiantly.

Arlene looked up at him innocently. "Of course," she answered quickly. "Do you think I would believe any friend like that about such a good friend? I should say not."

Bruce went on rapidly. "It seems as if everybody is trying to pull her down. Mrs. Hayes promised me faithfully that she would drop the whole affair. Said she was convinced. Well, you can see how she did it. Dropped it to the extent of getting my folks back home to raise more trouble."

Arlene did not answer. "That's a woman for you," Bruce

"What have you to say for yourself?"

continued. "Women always are looking for a loop hole so that they can make trouble for another woman. If they'd practice being a little truer to their own sex perhaps they'd get along a little better."

Arlene winced. Bruce wasn't being very complimentary—talking about women in front of her. She put her arm through his as they stood there together in a darkened corner of the big enclosed porch.

"Don't worry, darling," she cooed. "I'll stand by you. I'll go back home with you if you want me to. You can even tell your aunt that I am the girl who was with you, if you desire."

Bruce was praying for the evening to end. He wanted to get home, or to get some place where he could be alone so that he could think things out. Apparently it was all very easy. He didn't have Lois any longer. Why should he have to defend her? He could simply tell his aunt that it was all over, that he had broken up with Lois and that there was no further cause for worry.

Still, that didn't seem quite right, either. It made him feel as though he were walking out the back door, as though he were yellow, afraid to face things, and he wasn't. He decided to go after Lois and bring her up to his home, to clear her before everybody. Then, if his folk didn't believe him he would run away with her and tell them all that he believed her anyway.

There is something about human nature that simply rebels against wrong doing. In fact this affair only strengthened Bruce's feelings toward Lois. All the way to Arlene's apartment, he was thinking that he would go on up—and kidnap Lois! At least he would demand an explanation. He couldn't go on this way.

Margaret was still up when Arlene and Bruce arrived. She was lying on theavenport reading a book. It was late, but Bruce asked to come in anyway. It was evident, after he had entered the room, that there was only one thing he desired.

"Isn't Lois home, yet?" he asked pointedly.

Margaret looked at him as though she thought he were crazy. "Lois?"

Arlene hurried into the dressing room.

"Yes, Lois," Bruce said crossly. Margaret laid down her book. "Lois doesn't live here anymore," she said quickly. "I thought you knew that."
